An Egyptian security official reported that at least 32 Egyptians were killed and 15 injured when a coach ran off the road south of Cairo on Sunday

At least 60 people were travelling in the coach when overturned as it was travelling from the capital Cairo to the city of Minya.

"Thirty-two bodies were retrieved from the coach and 15 people were injured, and rescue workers are still working," the official told AFP, adding that the death toll was likely to rise.

Poor road conditions and lax traffic regulations in Egypt cause thousands of accidents every year.
