The Algerian of Youth and Sports minister, Hashimi Gayar, will be on a several days' visit to Egypt on Monday to discuss the final arrangements for the 14 November football match between Egypt and Algeria in the qualifying for the 2010 World Cup in South Africa.

Gayar will hold with the head of the National Council for Sport Hassan Saqr and the members of the Football Association.

Algerian diplomatic source told reporters on Thursday that the discussions, between the Algerian Minister of Sport and the Egyptian officials will focus on ways for a smooth match in the best manner that suits the two countries and the historical relations between them.

The source called on Egyptian and Algerian fans to show a sporting spirit, pointing out that the relationship between Egypt and Algeria are more important than any game.
